TEQSA: Evolving for More Effective Regulation

In this presentation we will discuss how TEQSA has adapted to a changing regulatory environment. We will explore how it has balanced embracing the principles of the government's de-regulation agenda whilst ensuring that it fulfils its role of maintaining standards in Australia's higher education sector.

We will explore how TEQSA's regulatory approach has evolved from the Agency's inception in 2012 and how it has used the experience of those first two years to develop a fully risk-based and streamlined approach to regulation. To help bring this to life we will look at examples of how these developments have positively impacted on the sector in terms of reducing the evidentiary requirements of higher education providers.
